- {Tom: Wow, it feels like you were gone for years, guys! How was your trip?
- Michelle: [excited] Out of this world, Tom!
- Spencer: [excited] Unbelievable! Northumberland is the most amazing place, and we made so many mates from around the world. I've got all their email addresses. I'm going to go and visit them as soon as I can, Tom.
- Tom: What did you do there?
- Michelle: All kinds of things. I don't know where to start.
- Spencer: I think my favourite thing was the assault course on the fourth day – we had to jump through hoops, run through boggy streams – I got really dirty I was covered in mud and dirt. We also had to climb over wooden logs which were pretty high. I was nervous but it was really exciting. Although, I fell off the last wooden log and injured my leg. It meant I couldn't go rock climbing the next day. I was so disappointed. I had to join the acting class. I didn't want to do it, but it was actually really good fun!
- Tom: Did your injury stop you doing many things?
- Spencer: Well, I did manage to go zorbing on the third day, the day before the assault course – that was good, and, to be honest, I really got into the acting, so it wasn't that bad – plus I did make some really good friends in the acting class.
- Michelle: Yeah, and you were really good at it, Spencer! Even I was impressed.
- Spencer: Thanks, Michelle.

Tom: How about you, Michelle? What was the most unforgettable thing about this trip?

Michelle: On the second last day, we had to go into a town and interview the local people in English about their culture! That made me really nervous and flustered – I couldn't find my words to begin with, but the people were so friendly and kind, although I found it quite difficult to understand them at first.

Spencer: I agree, but it was the presentation that made me most nervous.

Tom: You had to do a presentation?

Spencer: Yeah, about the interviews we did! It was really fun hearing everyone's stories about interviewing the local people. We heard about all kinds of strange and funny things – like black pudding, street performers, the English folk dancers.

Tom: Was that the last thing you did?

Michelle: Almost, yeah. We were given certificates after that in a little ceremony, which was really nice. [fade out]
